GOOD FELLOWS!

Here's a form for you to fill out! you will aid in stating your plans for helping the poor, the aged, and the ill. If you will be a Good Fellow on Christmas to some family in Washington please fill out the attached blank and send it to The Times Good Fellow Department.

I will be a good fellow to _____ persons or _____ families (as many as you wish). Please give me names of persons _____ (State what section of city you prefer to have assigned to you).

My name _____ Address _____ Telephone _____

Thanksgiving Day in Washington proved just what The Times expected and was confident that it would be—a banner day for the recruiting of the Good Fellow army.

On the Good Fellow desk this morning the postman piled a great volume of letters from Washington men and women who are anxious to be Good Fellows, the unfortunate in the Christmas which is rapidly approaching.

A lot of the letters today were from men and women who have served before. But a cut probably would show that most of the increment were men and women who haven't had the fun of being a Good Fellow, but want to experience it this year.

Some of the Good Fellows of last year, and the year before, and the year before that, having been telling their friends how much pleasure they derived from visiting the homes of the less fortunate, leaving the presents and seeing the happiness the gifts brought.

There were among the letters suggestions that a number of Good Fellows wished to band together and take care of large families where the needs were particularly acute. The Times welcomes such clubs. In other years young men and women from Government departments have formed such clubs, hired trucks on Christmas morning and made the rounds with those baskets. It is one of the best possible ways of passing Christmas.

Need Is Great This Year.

As the letters came in from Good Fellows today there also came letters from social workers and others telling of the need that exists for a great band of Good Fellows this year.

It is not a pleasant thing to have to record, but the plain truth is that there is more want in Washington this year than for years. The vast majority of Washington people are warmly clothed and snugly housed and it is difficult for them to visualize the misfortune that has overtaken many families in a year of payroll cutting.

Charitable organizations are going to take care of the getting of many families, but charitable organizations cannot take in the thousands of the bright toys, the candy, the bags of nuts, the dolls and the other things that go to make up a child's Christmas.

So The Times urges you to enlist in the Good Fellow army today. By getting aboard the Joy Special right now you will have ample time to get into touch with the family assigned to you, learn their needs and make the selection of your gifts now when shopping is comparatively easy. In dozens of Washington department stores and shops there are now being displayed those trinkets that mean everything to a red-blooded American youngster on Christmas morning.

There is real need for you here, Mr. Good Fellow, for upon you depends the happiness of some Washington child. There will be no

SENDER OF POISON IS SOUGHT

Prominent Lawyer Tells Police Woman Friend Received Doctored Candy.

Further facts in the sensational poison candy case of three weeks ago, which was given no publicity until yesterday, were furnished today by police officials.

The name of Alvin L. Newmyer, well-known Washington attorney, was announced by Inspector of Detectives Grant as that of the active agent in tracking down the sender of a box of heavily poisoned sweets to a beautiful woman, a friend and client of Newmyer's.

Name Kept Secret.

Her name had not been revealed up to this afternoon.

Inspector Grant declared it was not in his possession, and Newmyer could not be reached. All parties in the affair are said to be extremely desirous of avoiding publicity.

Jealousy, a love tangle, vengefulness are ascribed by officials as the possible cause of the dispatch of the route of the disinfected, and the segment resect. It was a crude piece of work, but it surely would have been effectual if anyone had eaten the candies.

Detective Sergeant Robert H. Sanders and Harry Evans were assigned to the investigation. They refused to make any comment upon possible findings today and Inspector Grant said he had received no report from them.

That the poison candy act is a favorite with persons of the city seeking revenge on others is shown by records of the District Chemist's office. Each year he and his assistants are called upon to analyze samples of sweets; many of them show poison contents and some of them are very ingeniously put up.

"It depends upon person's knowledge of chemistry," said Dr. Price, "just what sort of a job they do. A person skilled enough to use a hypodermic needle and a poison in solution can inject fatal drugs so skillfully that the results of the operation are invisible save on close scrutiny."

Other Attempts Expected.

Dr. Price concurred in Inspector Grant's remark of yesterday that stories of the case presented by Newmyer, and the alleged poison candy plot brought to the attention of the police by Paul B. Schweitzer, of 1423 R street yesterday, would possibly cause a flood of similar attempts.

"Vengeful persons have ideas put into their heads by such articles," said Dr. Price. "It shows them a way to achieve their designs against an enemy."

While the narcotic squad, Sanders and Evans, were reported today to be continuing an investigation of the Schweitzer affair, involving the March Stars at Noon.

The parade left Peace Monument at 12 o'clock and proceeded west on Pennsylvania avenue to Fifteenth street, passed south of the Treasury and the White House, thence to West Executive avenue.

At this point it turned north into West Executive avenue to Pennsylvania avenue and then west to Eighteenth street, where it disbanded.

Floral typifying the seasons and arranged by local floral establishments provoked particular applause. Another special attraction was the safety cars of the utility corporations.

FLOWER GIRLS FEATURE PARADE

Crowd Cheers Score of Floats in Demonstration for Safety Week.

Imbued with the spirit of Safety Week, and ambitious to indelibly impress its "Don't Get Hurt" slogan upon the public mind, hundreds of District and Government employees, school children, business men, and representatives of national and civic organizations stepped up the Avenue shortly after noon today in a demonstration designed to bring to a satisfactory conclusion the week's activities in the interest of accident prevention.

Featured by three score floats, which vied with each other for favor, and nearly a dozen bands, the parade provoked volleys of cheers from the thousands who lined the route of the march. They appeared to be worried by the cold winds which swept overhead.

Harping Reviews Parade.

President Harding and numerous high Government officials reviewed the parade as it passed through West Executive avenue. District Commissioners and members of the Safety Week committee, who led the parade, left the reviewing stand and entered the reviewing stand.

With all Government and District employees released from work mingling with the usual noonday crowd, special details of police, aided by Boy Scouts, were assigned to keep clear the path of the marchers. Early in the morning orders were issued that no parking of automobiles would be permitted on any streets over which the parade was to pass.

Melvin C. Hansen, marshal of the parade, was accompanied by Brig. Gen. William Mitchell and Major Harry Leonard, who acted as honorary marshals.

BRITAIN IS ACCUSED IN WAR

Secret Agreement With Greeks Made by Lloyd George, Athens Reports.

By FRANK E. MASON. International News Service Staff Correspondent.

PARIS, Dec. 1.—Revelations that former Premier Lloyd George of England and former Premier Eleutherios Venizelos of Greece entered into a secret diplomatic agreement in 1920, by which Great Britain promised to support Greece in the war against Turkey, were contained in an Athens dispatch printed by the Matin today.

According to the Athens correspondent of the Matin "there is evidence that the Greeks undertook their military adventure in Asia Minor at the suggestion of Britain, the Anglo-Greek Near East partnership promising the Greeks financial assistance to carry on the struggle."

Agreed to Share Turkey.

Greece, it was further stated, was promised equal shares in the subsequent division of Turkey. The cost for carrying on the war was to be imposed upon Turkey in the peace conference.

The Matin printed what purported to be the secret diplomatic reports of M. Venizelos while the negotiations with the British were in progress. These contain a letter from Venizelos, dated June 19, 1920, in which the former premier reported that the British general staff council had technically advised the Greeks.

Communications from Venizelos about the same time warned the Greek government that it could not expect any assistance from France and Italy and that the Greeks should be on the alert against invasion by bands of Bulgarian irregulars over the Thracian frontier.

Agreed to Hold Straits.

The British, according to the Matin's revelations, agreed to protect Constantinople and the Turkish straits. Venizelos insisted that the Ottoman empire be completely partitioned, leaving only the Anatolian plateau under Turkish sovereignty.

While the Turco-Greek war was in progress, said the Matin dispatch, the allies began to consider the advisability of lightening the original terms imposed upon Turkey. Venizelos successfully interfered at this juncture, demanding the maintenance of the original Turkish conditions and promising that Greece would force Turkey to accept the treaty of Sevres and to demobilize the Kemalist army.

Parliament Will Ask For Data Concerning Alleged Secret Pact

By DAVID M. CHURCH. International News Service Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Documents printed today by the Paris Matin showing that the former Lloyd George government supported Eleutherios Venizelos, ex-premier of Greece, in the Greek war against Turkey and actually promised assistance to Greece, caused a sensation here, although it has been an open secret that Britain aided the Greeks while the French assisted the Turks.

The matter will be taken up officially by the House of Commons on Monday when Premier Bonar Law will be asked if there is any documentary evidence on record here to show that the British minister at Athens gave the Greek active support in their military campaign in Asia Minor.

ARRESTED IN SLAYING OF FIVE PERSONS

He asserts his innocence and suggests the tragedy was in revenge for an earlier killing.

The cutting took place at H street northeast about 7 o'clock this morning. Nathan was the only eyewitness. He charges his father with the double cutting.

"I didn't cut her; she cut me," Glaubach told the police as he was being carried from the little store. "She came after me with a knife, cut my throat, and then I took it away from her. In the scuffle she was cut."

Tried to Cut Me, Says Boy.

But little Nathan vigorously denies his father's charge. "He cut mama and he tried to cut me," says the boy. "I saw him do it. Mama yelled and tried to get away, but she couldn't. Papa grabbed her by the chin and held her. Then he picked up a butcher knife and cut mama's throat. Mama got away after she was cut and ran out of the store."

Papa ran back after me. I ducked him, and then he yelled to me 'I'm going to cut myself.' And then he took the knife and drew it across the throat. Blood jumped out. I was scared and hid behind a counter. Then the police came."

Both Sent To Hospital.

Policeman Cheney, of the Sixth precinct, attracted by the woman's cries rushed to the house. He found Mrs. Glaubach lying on the pavement in front of the store, and Glaubach lying on his back in a rear room of the store. He rushed Glaubach to Emergency Hospital. Policeman John W. Garner, of No. 6, came a few minutes later, commandeered an automobile and took Mrs. Glaubach to Casualty.

The cutting, young Nathan says, came after his father charged his mother with deserting him.

Separated for Three Months.

The Glaubachs have been separated for about three months. The mother came to Washington six weeks ago, took rooms at 2825 I street northwest. They lived there about six weeks and then Mrs. Glaubach bought out a little store on H street.

"Papa followed us here," said Nathan. "He said he was going to kill mama. We were afraid, and yesterday mama went to the police and got out a warrant."

Police of the Sixth precinct confirmed the boy's story that a warrant was out for the father. They said it hadn't been sent to the precinct, however, for service. It was

POLICE SEEKING 12 DEAD, 60 HURT WEAPON IN 5 SLAYINGS

By International News Service.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 1.—Order was restored here today after riots in which many persons were killed and wounded, while 30,000 residents of the city were protesting against the lack of water. An official check up today put the dead at twelve and the wounded at more than sixty.

Rioting broke out in front of the city hall when police turned machine guns upon the demonstrators while they were demanding the resignation of the mayor.

Not since the bloody days of 1913 have the streets of the capital exhibited such a warlike appearance, with flying bullets and dead and wounded. Many women were in the crowd.

While the leaders were breaking into city hall a delegation of labor leaders called upon President Obregon asking for guarantees of protection and resumption of the water supply. Federal troops were then sent to replace the policemen. The city has been without water for ten days.

Bodies of the five murdered, burned to a crisp, were found by firemen when they were called out by the blaze. The bodies were found in a pool of blood in bed, with the skull of each crushed, apparently by a blunt instrument.

Burchfield, whom witnesses say made threats to kill his wife and the Smiths, was arrested in Johnson City. Blood was found on his shirt and trousers, the officers say.
